

Introduction

Our index of all the people named in Burg Reuland's records (1661-1870) comprises almost 50,000 individuals. Because this list is alphabetized, researchers may miss variants of the same name. This tool reduces those 50,000 names to about 2,400 families of variant spellings of the same name.

For example, there are over 780 persons with the surname of "Arens," the most common spelling of that name. However, there are five other variants, resulting in a total of six different spellings, of which "Arens" is the most common:

Arends = Arendt = Arens = Arentz = Arentzss = Arenz

In this case, a search on the first 4 letters, "Aren" will locate every variation of that surname.

Things are not quite so easy in some other cases. For example, the surname "Haguinet" has the following variants:

Haguinet = Haquinet = Henguinet = Henquinet

Locating all variants of this name requires searching the index for each variant.

Here's another example:

Hamer = Hamesch = Hammer

Searches for the surname "Hamer" should also search "Hamesch" and "Hammer," which are just orthographical variants of the same name.

Sometimes identifying alternate spellings of the same surname requires guesses which may be wrong. Consider these two entries from the cross-reference table:

Mageres = Mageris = Magerus = Majerus
Maier = Mayer = Meyer = Majeres = Majeris = Majers = Majerus

I am not sure that "Mageres" (with a G) is the same surname as "Majerus" with a J or Y or an I).

In German records, women are sometimes given a feminine form of their surname by adding "in" to the masculine form of the name. In Burg-Reuland, near modern-day Luxembourg, the feminine form is "en" rather than "in," as in these two examples:

Kam = Kamen
Kob = Koben

Another common variant in this area is changing the ending of some surnames from "er" to "esch" as in the following two examples:

Schneider = Schneidesch
Schroeder = Schroedesch

We encourage users of the index to search for all suggested name variants we have identified in the list and then reach your own conclusion about the validity of our suggestions.
